NET 4.6 requires product key 030E2. While products from other Autodesk platforms, like AutoCAD LT, AutoCAD Architecture, AutoCAD Map 3D, and Civil 3D, use the same key to authenticate with the Autodesk Authoring Environment, each package name has a different product key to the Autodesk Authoring Environment and requires a different product key to install on each of the platforms. Each Autodesk product is distributed in multiple editions: a common edition, a perpetual edition (e.g. AutoCAD 2012 and AutoCAD LT 2012), and an academic edition. Each edition is restricted to use by a specific group: common edition can be used by anyone, perpetual editions cannot be redistributed, and the academic editions are supported only in higher-education institutions. Academic editions are pre-installed on more than 55,000 schools, colleges, and universities worldwide as of April 2018. On the latest Autodesk software, which includes the new Autodesk® Design Review or Autodesk® Revit® products, Autodesk® LifeSciences, or Autodesk 360, the following table summarizes the key to authenticate Autodesk Authoring Environment software: Autodesk software licenses In addition to the traditional annual licensing, Autodesk offers software licenses that change for every new major version. Since Autodesk Authoring Environment is a software bundle that consists of multiple products, it has multiple licenses, one per product. The following table lists Autodesk Authoring Environment's key licenses: Each of these licenses has a price, which changes for every new major version release. For the first 6 years of its history, the following table summarizes Autodesk Authoring Environment's key license versions and prices: Partners NACIS, a company based in Baltimore, is Autodesk's chief technical partner for Autodesk Authoring Environment software and the Autodesk Design Review toolset. The company provides technical support, consulting, and training, as well as technical leadership to create Autodesk Authoring Environment software for Autodesk users. In addition to NACIS, Autodesk Authoring Environment software licenses include an Autodesk Technology Network technical support and maintenance agreement, which provides support services and maintenance for Autodesk Authoring Environment software, Autodesk Revit software, Autodesk Inventor, Autodesk Inventor Design Review 82157476af
